FIRE FIGHTING AT SEA BUYING OLD FIDDLES. Many Fine Instruments Have Been

Methods of Extinguishing Flames on Board Ships.

RIGID DISCIPLINE THE RULE.

When the Alarm is Sounded Every Member of the Crew Has His Station and Carries Out the Particular Duty Intrusted to Him.

Of all disasters that can befall a mariner than a fire at sea. Indeed, the mals of Lloyd's record few greater ean tragedies and, be it said, no picuous instances of galantry and heroic effort than those coned with ships afire.

No wonder, then, in view of the dreadful possibilities of an outbreak of fire on board, that a thorough knowledge of the proper steps to be taken in extinguishing the flames at the out-set or at least holding them in check ted of every officer from the captain downward.

Most vessels are nowadays fitted with hydrants, several on each deck, and in the case of large liners hose er boat carries a number of rtable extinguishers which can be strapped on a man's back. The spray in these is, of course, thin, but very fective in subduing small outbreaks re the fire has not secured too firm

Fire drill forms a weekly feature in the routine on every ocean liner. Evmber of the crew literally, from in to cabin boy, has his "fire allotted to him, at which, then the signal is given, he takes his on and carries out the particular luty intrusted to him.

When an actual outbreak occurs the fire alarm is if possible avoided, so as to prevent panic among the passengers. Word is passed quietly around, the pas-sengers being kept in ignorance as ag as possible. In fact, more than ut any suspicion on the part of passengers that the outbreak was or than an imaginary one engineered by the officers to give the passengers chance of seeing what could be done in the event of the real thing occurring.

In many cases, of course, the passenalways broken as lightly as possible, and some special entertainment—a conrt, a dance, theatricals, and so on-is t up to allay any natural feeling of rvous anxiety. Of course if the fire signs of becoming unmanageable the boats are got ready and swung out in case it appears necessary to on the ship.

Every boat on large liners is kept ully provisioned, food sufficient for everal days being contained in air and rater tight tanks. The worst fires at see are those bich cannot easily be got at. These mally occur amid the cargo in the ver holds and are often spontaneous their origin. In such cases it is hly dangerous to open the hatches. fire, which may have been smolblaze as soon as the air is ad-even the ventilators are stopped up.

If the holds are fitted with steam pipes, the steam is at once turned on; otherwise holes are cut in the deck, just large enough to admit the nozzlos of the fire home and water is vicerous.

of the fire hose, and water is vigorous-ly pumped into the hold.

In one form of extinguishing ap-paratus, instead of steam or water, sulphurous fumes are injected into the hold, the fumes being generated in a machine specially fitted for that se. This injection method is ighly effective and rarely falls if the he steam or fumes are turned on rom the upper deck. If a fire breaks out in the hold and assumes such dimensions that steam njection is powerless to check it, the water and, if necessary, beached, n any case the sea cocks of the particular hold are opened and the hold allowed to fill with water. This can usually be done with very little fear of the vessel foundering, as modern built ships are divided into many compartments separated by strong water tight bulkheads of steel or iron. Such is the buoyancy of a vessel so constructed that instances have been known of a craft remaining affoat with only one or two of these compartments dry,

if the burning hold is a very large ne and by flooding it with water there is danger of the vessel foundering, the cargo in another hold is thrown overboard or "jettisoned," as it is called at sea, to counteract the weight of water admitted into the first old. As a last resource, the vessel, if in dock or shallow water, is scut-tied by opening the sea cocks. This has done more than once in Tilbury seldom hear nowadays of fire breaking out in the passengers' quar-ters on large liners. The introduction electric lighting on board ship has doubt conduced greatly to this imed state of matters. When a fire break out in the cabin, it is ususoon detected, for a constant sich is kept by the officers and night tewards, who make periodical tours of inspection during the nocturnal rs.-Pearson's Weekly.

To Recover Her Child. "Can you help me to recover my ilid?" asked the poor woman.

"Is your child lost?" Oh, no. His clothes are worn out."

Many people with chronic throat and rung trouble have found comfort and relief in Foley's Honey and Tar as it cures stubborn coughs after other treatment has failed. L. M. Ruggles, Ressnor, Iowa, writes: "The doctors said I had consumption, and I got no better until I took Foley's Honey and Tar. It stopped the hemorrhages and pain in my lungs and they are now as sound as a bullet." F. B. Brill, local Picked Up Cheap. Great numbers of fine old violins and violoncellos that come into the high class market of London are procured through the medium of advertisements inserted in obscure country papers and especially those of ancient cathedral cities.

Of course few of the fiddles thus obtained are veritable masterpieces, but a great many of them are fine examples of early English and foreign makers, and they are often bought for ridiculously small prices by a group of experts, who have brought the busiship none is more dreaded by the ness to a lucrative system. Many a struggling family of long descent, in some out of the way part of the country, happens to see in the one county newspaper of the week that good prices are given for old fiddles, and some long forgotten instrument in a lumber room or put away on a shelf suddenly comes to mind.

Correspondence follows. The dealer sends a deposit in order that some fiddle spoken of may be sent to him and examine'l, and he usually replies that the instrument sent is dilapidated and but so-so generally, but that he is willing to give 80 shillings or £2 for it. In a great many cases the offer is accepted offhand, and in this way most is kept in handy places, ready to be attached to the hydrants at a moment's notice. Moreover, every large from a Shropshire farm at the price of £2 sold the same day to a west end dealer for nearly £100.

> One of the most shrewd and respect ed of all these dealers was until a year or two sgo a humble member of the orchestra of a London suburban theater. He began to advertise in remote papers to the greatest limits of his scanty wages and is now one of the most extensive and prosperous dealers in the trade.-London Tit-Bits.

A SILLY TRAGEDY.

The Duel Between Tom Porter and

Sir Henry Bellasis. me of the royalists who were forced to endure the English common wealth seemed to console themselves for the duliness of life under a Puritan government by fighting as many duels as they could compass, so that ignoble squabbles and foolish plots make up the history of their days.

Tom Porter was of a family which had zealously served the king. Under the new government his occupation was gone, and he descended to a triviality of life which finally involved him in a most pathetic event. This was a duel which he fought with his friend, Sir Henry Bellasis, and which, says Pepys in his "Diary," is worth remembering for "the silliness of the quarrel,  a kind of emblem of the general complexion of the whole kingdom."

But, silly as the quarrel undoubtedly was, it carried in it an element of heart-

The two young men involved we intimate friends and companions, but one day, "being merry in company," Tom Porter said he should like to see the man in England who would dare give him a blow. With that Sir Henry Bellasis struck him a box on the ear. The inevitable duel followed, wherein each was wounded. Sir Henry proved ter, kissed and bade him fly.

"For," said he, "Tom, thou hast hurt me, but I will make shift to stand upon The proper course is to exclude the my legs till thou mayest withdraw, for air in every possible way; consequently I would not have thee troubled for what thou hast done."

Porter profited by his friend's generosity and escaped to France. Sir Henry died a few days later, and Pepys concludes, "It is pretty to see how the world do talk of them as a couple of fools that killed one another out of love."

Spying on Bargain Gifts. The engaged girl was found studying life in an auction room.

"I don't expect to buy anything," she said, "but I want to see if anybody I know buys anything. A lot of suc-tioneers are advertising that they have on hand bric-a-brac and pictures and odds and ends of furniture suitable for wedding presents. That set me to wondering if any of my friends would try to avail themselves of these auction room bargains when buying presents for me. I saw two girls here this afternoon who have been invited to my wedding. One bought some kind of a brass bowl, another a vase. They got the things dirt cheap. I fancy they are for me. If they are-well, just wait till those girls get married!"-New York Press.

When to Take Off the Sinker.

For angling in quiet, deep running water more sinkers should be placed on the leader to keep It down from the surface, but if angling in a quick running brook or river for chub, dace or brook trout the float and sinkers should be removed and the bait allowed to run in front of the angler wherever it wills on the surface by the action of the current, which takes it naturally just as nature does their general food.—Louis Rhead in Outing

A Long Tumble Needed. "They say that when a man is falling from a height he thinks of all his evil deeds.

"I don't believe it." "Wny not?"

"Some men would have to fall out of a balloon to get 'em all in."-Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Floored. One Sexton-Do you have matins at your church? The Other-No, we have ollcloth.—Harper's Weekly.

Amicable Adjustment "I want you distinctly to understand, Emil, that when your colleague's wife has a new hat I want one too."

"Calm yourself, my dear. We've settled it between us. You're neither of you going to get one."-Fliegende Blatter.

Built That Way. "What does it mean, pa, when it says a man 'bent his steps?' "That he was bow legged, my son." -New York Press.
